THE HISTORY OF "GRAN TURISMO"

The term "Gran Turismo" is a direct Italian translation of "Grand Touring". Although it is applied to a class of automobiles today, it predates the automobile by a considerable amount of time. In England, as far back as the 17th Century, Peers of the Realm and members of wealthy families would go on long trips to travel the European continent. The journey was called the "Grand Tour", and it was an expected part of a young gentleman's education. The Grand Tour could last for several years, and was made by horse-drawn coach. Major Continental cities, including Paris, and historic landmarks were stops on the route. The very final destination was always Rome, the center for European art and culture since the Renaissance. There participants would socialize with their peers and scholars, and enroll in courses of academic study to pursue a classical education.

The carriages used for the Grand Tour acquired the name "Gran Turismo" in Italian. When automobiles replaced horse-drawn carriages as the conveyance of choice for Grand Tour participants in the early Twentieth Century, a certain type became popular. It was a fast and light two-seater, but more comfortable and well-appointed than a pure sports car. The genre reached its peak after World War II, when limited-production and specially-constructed two-seaters became popular with members of royalty, wealthy sportsmen, and movie stars. Many of these cars were raced, and the production car category in European racing became known as Gran Turismo, Grand Touring, or just plain GT. Regulations required two-seat interiors, spare tires, and luggage capacity, and, in the 1950s at least, GT-class racers could be and were driven to the track, raced, and driven home. Production-based racing classes are still known as "GT" classes in many racing series today.

ABOUT REPLAY FILES

The size of the replay files is indicated in units of sectors. The size of a file is roughly 30 sectors per lap in a race using a DUAL SHOCK analog controller, and roughly 15 sectors per lap when using a digital controller.

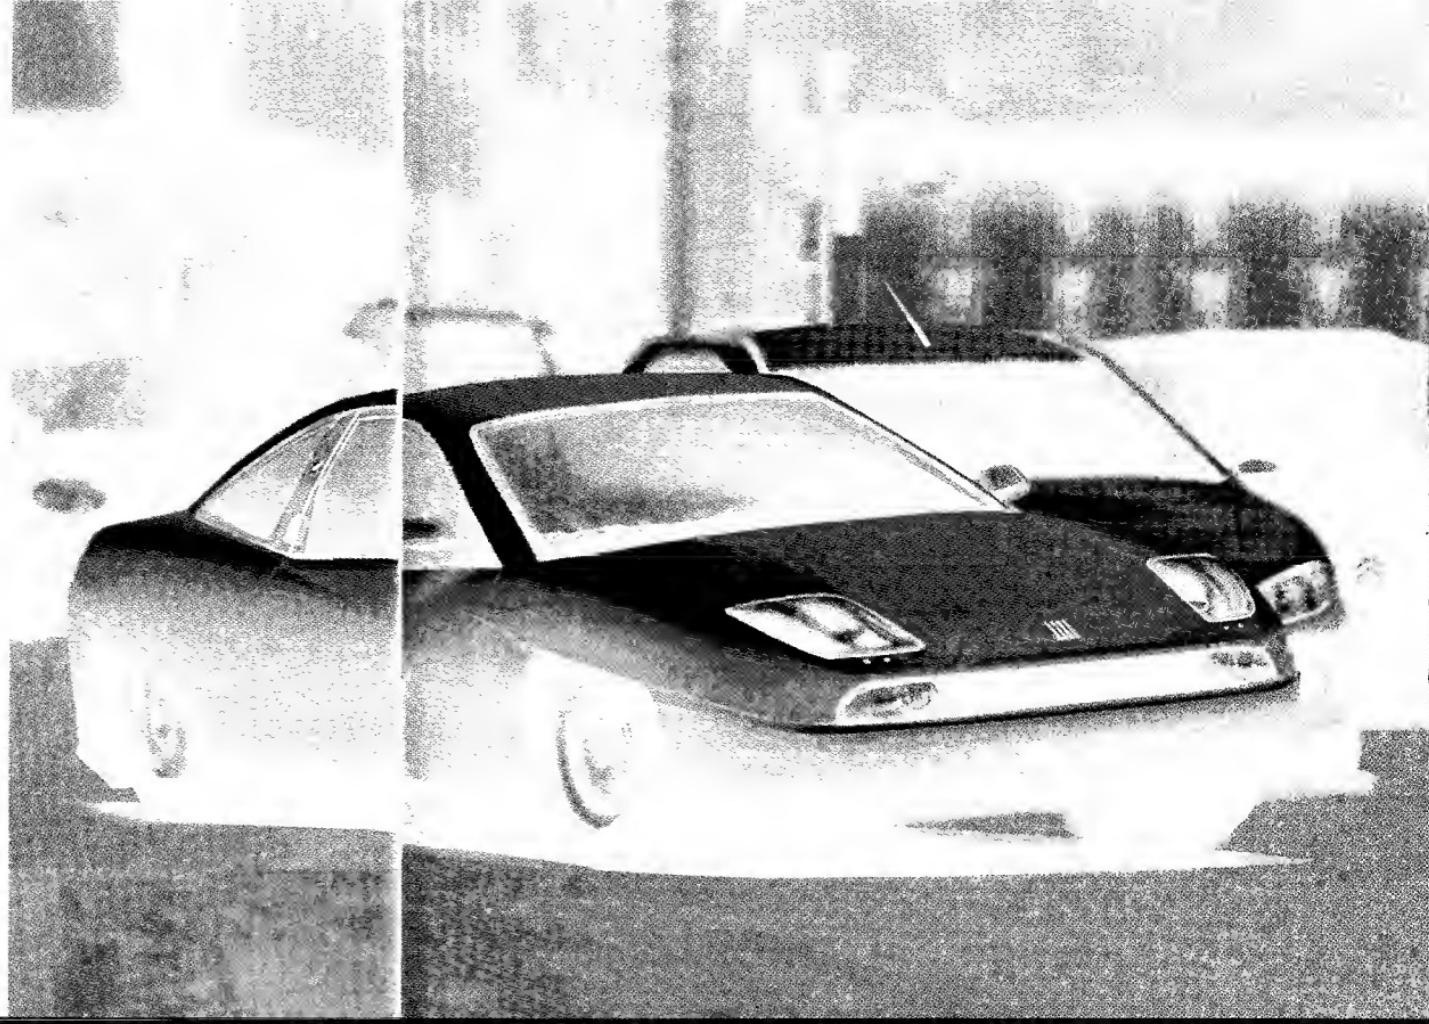

Only one replay file can be created on a MEMORY CARD and that file can accommodate as much replay data as the MEMORY CARO's capacity allows. If there are no pre-existing replay files on the MEMORY CARO, the game will create a new replay file using at least 3 blocks. 149 sectors of data can be saved with a 3 block replay file.

When saving replay data to a MEMORY CARO that already has a replay file on it, you can save as new data or overwrite existing data. If there is insufficient space on the MEMORY CARO, press the L1 and R1 buttons at the same time to bring up the Delete Replay screen, then delete unneeded data to make room for the new data to be saved.

The Time Trial replay data is managed by each lap. Approximately the last three laps of the replay are saved. However, if one lap exceeds a certain length of time, the replay for the current lap will stop and the replay will skip to the start of the next lap.

When you race in Time Trial mode, the fastest lap is replayed as a "ghost" on the following laps. You can save "ghost" data on a replay file but "ghost" data can only be used on the same track in which the data was saved.
